Local pair present at nat'l drug abuse conference

Sommer and Spielman presented on the development of Project NESST, which works with parents, caregivers, and infants to address the impact of substance use and trauma on parents’ mental health, the early parent-child relationship, and infant development. Services are available free of charge to families of all faiths and races in Greater Boston who are caring for infants who were exposed to opiates, cocaine, prescription medications or other substances that may have contributed to challenges in the infant’s postpartum course or in the parent-infant relationship.
